H-Building courtyard gets a clean-up and makeover

On the afternoon of Thursday, July 25, the Foundation's Projects and Programs Committee arrived on campus to clean up the courtyard and improve the aesthetic of the school's main entrance.

Committee members Jim Schlosser (retired principal), Martha Robertson (retired librarian), and Apolonia Stice (retired math teacher) were assisted by a few of Stice's family members and a couple of her hard-working friends.

Windward School for Adults' bulletin board was refurbished, weeds and detritus were removed from planters, and the pavement was power washed. The biggest challenge was the removal of the heavy-metal-blue-monster which formerly housed two soda/drink machines. Unfinished jobs were completed over the next few days, including planting new plants and cleaning the horse sculpture.

With the support of Principal James Rippard, school custodians, and volunteers, the courtyard is shaping up nicely to pleasantly welcome students, teachers, staff, parents, and visitors to the school.

Something for everyone
at Kalāheo Foundation's Lū'au

After a hiatus of several years, the Kalāheo High School ohana gathered on Saturday, July 20, at Kokokahi YWCA for its annual lū'au which included Hawaiian food and music, casino-style games, winetasting, and prizes.

The hard work of Events Committee members Jana Paz, Tim White, and Alex Ress—all Kalāheo alumni—brought together alumni, retired faculty, and other community supporters for an enjoyable and festive evening.
